"The improving labor market is showing normal seasonal hiring at this point. We expect to see a sustained demand for employees in warehouses, distribution centers and customer contact centers as consumer spending increases throughout the holiday shopping season.

"Overall, the economy is continuing on a path of steady, moderate growth with the temporary employment sector accounting for a good portion of the jobs being created. Credentialed professionals remain highly sought after, led by the healthcare, legal, engineering, technology and scientific industries, indicating continuing stability for the employment picture leading into the New Year."
